Asia's strong economic growth, rapid urbanization, and evolving lifestyles are fueling the expansion of the region's health insurance market. As populations shift toward urban centers and sedentary habits become more common, the incidence of non-communicable diseases continues to rise driving greater demand for comprehensive health coverage. Furthermore, varying regulatory frameworks across countries play a pivotal role in shaping competition, market behavior, and the overall development of the health insurance sector. Health insurance in Asia stands at a pivotal crossroads. As economies expand and populations age, the region faces a dual challenge sustaining equitable healthcare access while managing the growing cost of care. Several developing markets still struggle with low insurance penetration, limited affordability, and high out-of-pocket expenditures that strain households.

Asia's health insurance market continues its robust growth trajectory, reflecting the region's rising healthcare demands and evolving insurance ecosystems. Average spending per capita on health insurance across Asia is expected to reach US$84.73, underscoring the growing prioritization of personal health security among individuals and families. Looking ahead, the sector is forecast to maintain steady momentum with a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.23% between 2025 and 2030, bringing the market volume to approximately US$454.14 billion by 2030. This sustained expansion signals strong opportunities for insurers, healthcare providers, and policymakers to innovate and strengthen Asia's integrated health ecosystem. (Source: Statista, Health Insurance Market in Asia 2025)

Medical inflation is outpacing general inflation, non-communicable diseases like diabetes, cancer, and cardiovascular illnesses are surging, and healthcare providers are navigating new expectations for quality, transparency, and digital accessibility. The convergence of these factors calls for a fundamental rethink of how insurance can integrate with the broader health ecosystem not merely as a payer, but as a partner in prevention, care coordination, and wellness management.

Under the theme "AsiaHealth 360: Insurance at the Core of Health Ecosystem," the 21st Asia Conference on Healthcare and Health Insurance will convene the region's most influential leaders from insurance, healthcare, government, and technology. Together, they will explore how to redesign health protection models for a rapidly changing landscape where sustainability, innovation, and collaboration define success.

AsiaHealth 360 encapsulates a holistic vision one where insurance is not an endpoint but the connective core that sustains the entire health ecosystem. As Asia's healthcare demands continue to evolve, this conference will chart the roadmap toward a resilient, equitable, and future-ready insurance landscape that truly puts people at the heart of health.

Spotlight Session 2: Managing and Sustaining Health Insurance Performance

1:05 pm From Claims Processing to Clinical Governance: How Independent Medical Reviews Unlock Value-Based Health Insurance

As Asia's healthcare landscape evolves, insurers face mounting pressure from medical inflation, chronic disease spread and the growing demand for value-based care. This session introduces a new framework for integrating medical specialists and second-opinion networks into insurer workflows which transforms claims management from a transactional process into a strategic platform for clinical governance. By placing physicians at the center of clinical decision making, insurers can become true quality drivers within the healthcare ecosystem, improving outcomes while maintaining cost efficiency. We will demonstrate how utilization reviews reduce unnecessary interventions and how partnerships between insurers, corporates, and providers can promote proactive value-based care. The session will also explore how automation and AI can work side by side with human clinical touch.

Nir Kaminer
Founder, MedRev International

1:30 pm Smart Claims, Smarter Care: Leveraging AI and analytics to improve claims efficiency and prevent fraud

As healthcare costs rise and fraud risks grow, insurers are turning to AI and advanced analytics to streamline claims processes and enhance operational efficiency. This session explores how data-driven solutions can accelerate claims processing, detect irregularities, and enable proactive interventions that improve patient care.

1:55 pm Research and Development Initiatives In Malaysian Life and Health Insurance, Particularly in the Area of Ai-Driven Risk Scoring and Personalized Underwriting

Dr Khoo Wooi Chen
Head of Department, Institute of Actuarial Science and Data Analytics, UCSI University

2:20 pm Panel Session: Staying Resilient: Building Sustainable Health Insurance Models for the Future

Health insurance is facing unprecedented challenges from rising costs, evolving health risks, and shifting consumer expectations. This panel brings together industry leaders, regulators, and innovators to explore strategies for creating sustainable, resilient health insurance models across Asia.

Panelists will share insights on balancing affordability, risk management, and customer-centric solutions, while examining how technology, partnerships, and innovative product design can ensure long-term sustainability in an increasingly complex healthcare landscape.

The Market for Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM) Insurance: Econometric Evidence on Moral Hazard and Selection

Voluntary health insurance in Hong Kong offers an add-on option to cover Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM). This option is typically chosen by 34.3% of enrollees with Western Medicine (WM) benefits and 10.7% of the total population. If adverse selection dominates, individuals with higher expected healthcare needs are more likely to choose TCM-inclusive coverage, leading to estimates of utilization biased upwards in naïve models. However, TCM's holistic appeal could attract people who are more attuned to health and wellness, leading to beneficial selection and lower than average subsequent utilization. We use IV models to detect the direction of the bias. Our instrument set is lags of the insurance coverage of one's occupational group. Our findings support the beneficial selection hypothesis. IV estimates are two to four times larger than non-IV estimates, indicating that those with a lower propensity to utilize health services self-select into TCM-inclusive coverage. Using instruments to control for bias due to self-selection, TCM-inclusive coverage significantly increases both TCM and WM utilization across extensive and intensive margins, with lower out-of-pocket (OOP) spending, indicating both moral hazard and a complementary relationship between TCM and WM.

2021 Winner of the Sharmanov Prize in Primary Health Care

4:05 pm Silver Economics: Redesigning Health Insurance for an Ageing Asia. How insurers can build sustainable health portfolios that address the growing costs and care needs of older adults

As Asia's population ages, insurers face the dual challenge of rising healthcare costs and increasingly complex care needs. This session explores how health insurance providers can design sustainable portfolios tailored to older adults, balancing affordability, coverage adequacy, and long-term financial viability.

4:30 pm Closing Remarks for Day 1

Day Two: 27 March 2026, Friday

8:00 am Registration and welcome reception with coffee and tea

Spotlight Session 3: Regional Deep Dive: Navigating the Evolving Health Insurance Landscape in Asia

9:00 am Hong Kong: Advanced private health insurance ecosystem, integration with public health services, and innovations in high-net-worth and expatriate coverage

Hong Kong's private health insurance market is evolving with sophisticated solutions that complement public health services while catering to high-net-worth individuals and expatriates. This session explores innovations in coverage design, digital integration, and personalized services that enhance accessibility, efficiency, and customer experience.

9:25 am How Are Insurers Innovating Takaful Products to Meet Evolving Health Needs in Malaysia?

Malaysia's Takaful market is evolving to address changing health needs, rising medical costs, and growing demand for Shariah-compliant solutions. This session examines how insurers are designing innovative Takaful products that integrate preventive care, wellness programs, and digital health services.

9:50 am Panel Session: As Asia's healthcare needs evolve, how are insurers adapting their products and strategies to address diverse markets, growing digital adoption, and increasing demand for affordable, accessible coverage?

Asia's healthcare landscape is changing rapidly, driven by diverse market demands, growing digital adoption, and increasing expectations for affordable and accessible coverage. This panel brings together insurers, policymakers, and digital health innovators to discuss how products and strategies are evolving to meet these challenges.

Panelists will explore approaches to tailoring coverage for different markets, leveraging technology for greater efficiency and engagement, and developing sustainable solutions that balance affordability, access, and quality of care across the region.

Panellists:

Peter Fang

Chief Insurance Officer, The GBA Healthcare Group

Sean Deehan

Head of Hong Kong & Macau and Greater China Divisional Leader, Insurance Consulting and Technology, WTW

Andrea Ma

Head of Healthcare Investment, Swire Pacific Limited

10:50 am Networking Session

Connect, collaborate, and converse with Asia's leading health insurance professionals, policymakers, and innovators. This session offers a unique opportunity to share insights, explore partnerships, and exchange ideas in a relaxed, interactive environment.

Whether you're seeking strategic alliances, market intelligence, or fresh perspectives, our networking session is the perfect platform to expand your professional circle and turn connections into actionable opportunities.

11:15 am How Are Insurers Leveraging Digital Channels to Overcome Coverage Gaps in Indonesia?

Indonesia's vast geography and diverse population create significant challenges in delivering comprehensive health insurance coverage. This session explores how insurers are harnessing digital channels, mobile platforms, and telehealth solutions to reach underserved communities and close coverage gaps.

11:40 am How Is Singapore Shaping the Future of Health Insurance Through Smart Systems and Digital Integration?

Singapore is at the forefront of digital innovation in healthcare, using smart systems and technology to enhance health insurance delivery, efficiency, and accessibility. This session explores how insurers, regulators, and digital health providers are collaborating to integrate data, automation, and telehealth solutions into traditional coverage models.

12:05 pm How Is the Philippines Expanding Health Insurance Access Through Public-Private Collaboration?

Expanding access to health insurance is a critical priority in the Philippines, where collaboration between government agencies, insurers, and healthcare providers is driving innovative solutions. This session explores how public-private partnerships are improving coverage, affordability, and healthcare outcomes for diverse populations.

12:30 pm Corporate Luncheon Buffet

Spotlight Session 4 : Critical Illness & High-Impact Health Risks

1:30 pm How can innovation in cancer coverage expand access and improve affordability for patients?

Cancer treatment remains one of the most significant financial and healthcare challenges in Asia. This session explores how insurers are designing innovative coverage solutions that improve affordability, enhance access to care, and provide comprehensive support for patients.

1:55 pm How can health insurance solutions address the growing risk of cardiovascular diseases in Asia?

Cardiovascular diseases are a leading health challenge across Asia, impacting both individuals and healthcare systems. This session explores how health insurance solutions can help mitigate risk through preventive programs, early detection, and tailored coverage options.

Ex: As vaping and e-cigarette use surge among Asia's youth and young adults, health systems are facing a new wave of lifestyle-related cardiovascular risks. Unlike traditional smoking, vaping's long-term health impact remains under-researched – yet early studies point to increased risks of heart disease and hypertension.

2:20 pm Panel Session: As critical illnesses and high-impact health risks rise across Asia, how can insurers design coverage that is both sustainable and truly meets patient needs?

As critical illnesses and high-impact health risks continue to rise across Asia, insurers face the challenge of providing coverage that is both sustainable and genuinely responsive to patient needs. This panel brings together industry leaders, policymakers, and healthcare innovators to explore strategies for product design, risk management, and patient-centered solutions.

Panelists will discuss approaches to balancing affordability, comprehensive protection, and long-term sustainability, while examining how innovation, data analytics, and preventive care can help insurers deliver meaningful coverage for those most at risk.

Panelist:

Datuk Dr Thirunavukarasu Rajoo

CEO, CareClinics Healthcare Services Pvt Ltd
President, Malaysian Medical Association

3:20 pm Networking Session

Connect, collaborate, and converse with Asia's leading health insurance professionals, policymakers, and innovators. This session offers a unique opportunity to share insights, explore partnerships, and exchange ideas in a relaxed, interactive environment.

Whether you're seeking strategic alliances, market intelligence, or fresh perspectives, our networking session is the perfect platform to expand your professional circle and turn connections into actionable opportunities.

3:40 pm How can health insurance integrate preventive strategies to better manage diabetes and lifestyle-related conditions?

With the rise of diabetes and lifestyle-related health conditions across Asia, insurers are increasingly focusing on preventive strategies to improve long-term health outcomes. This session explores how health insurance products can incorporate wellness programs, digital health tools, and early intervention initiatives to manage chronic risks more effectively.

4:05 pm Rare & High-Cost Illnesses: Designing Sustainable Coverage Models

Rare and high-cost illnesses pose significant challenges for insurers, patients, and healthcare systems across Asia. This session explores strategies for designing sustainable coverage models that provide adequate protection while managing financial risk.

4:30 pm Critical Illness Insurance: Balancing Risk, Premiums, and Patient Outcomes

Critical illness insurance is a cornerstone of financial protection for patients facing serious health events, but designing products that balance risk, affordability, and outcomes remains challenging. This session explores strategies for optimizing coverage, pricing, and claims management to meet both insurer sustainability and patient needs.

4:55 pm Closing Remarks for Day 2

Note: Programme is subject to change.
